

For Immediate Release
September 28, 2009

UNCW Student Activists to Attend Carolina's Power Shift Summit

UNCW ECO is working to recruit as many students as possible to participate in the Carolina's Power Shift to take place from October 17-18 at UNC-Chapel Hill. The Carolina's Power Shift will be one out of eleven Power Shift conferences to take place across the country. Like the national Power Shift last February, attended by 12,000 youth from every state and Canada, the regional conferences will be focused on climate change policy and solutions. UNCW ECO and other UNCW students will be among the 1,000 expected attendees from North Carolina and South Carolina. The conference will bring youth together to expand their knowledge of current issues and craft a winning climate plan during this crucial time. With the UN climate conference in Copenhagen less than 100 days away, youth of the nation are once again joining forces to push for a renewable energy future. Registration and more information can be found at uncweco.com.

What: The Carolina's Power shift is a youth conference focused on climate change policy and solutions. Students will be in attendance for a weekend of inspiring lectures, workshops, panels and opportunities to network.

Who: The Carolina's Power Shift is a project of the North Carolina Youth Climate Coalition.

Where: UNC-Chapel Hill

When: October 17-18

###

Contact:
Vanessa Haugh
vanessah90@gmail.com
uncweco.com